A WORLD HERITAGE ISLAND
SHARK BAY | WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Discovering Dirk Hartog Island

There is no other place in Australia that has such historical significance as this unique island, situated off the western coastline of Australia. This was the place that the first European stepped onto Australian soil in 1616. Sailing from the Netherlands in Eendracht, Dirk Hartog landed at Cape Inscription at the northern end of the island where he erected a post to which he nailed a pewter plate inscribed with the details of his two day visit. This was the start of the discovery and exploration of the vast Australian continent and Dirk Hartog, after whom the island was named, was followed by further early explorers from the Netherlands, Britain and France.

Whilst Dirk Hartog Island (and Australia) was unknown to Europeans prior to 1616, it was not uninhabited. The indigenous Malgana people have lived and thrived in this unique salt water country for at least 40 000 years before Dirk Hartog's arrival. It's extraordinary natural heritage values are what has secured the island's World Heritage status. The unique flora and fauna and geological formations are protected within one million square kilometres of marine and terrestrial parks and reserves and island consists of ochre-red cliff lines, coral reefs and pristine beaches.

Now a National Park, Dirk Hartog Island is home to some of the most endangered (and in some cases extinct on the mainland) native Australian wildlife which has been made possible by an ambitious project called "Return to 1616," aimed at restoring the flora and fauna to the way it was prior to European settlement. This has made the island an ark for some of the rarest and most beautiful sea and land animals including birdlife that can only be sited on Dirk Hartog Island.

Australia's Last sunset

Like no other

Perched up high on 600ft steep cliffs overlooking the Indian Ocean, experience a sunset like no other.

The vast island horizon painted with vibrant hues of orange, pink and red, as the sun descends on the rugged Australian coastline and its last rays of light illuminate the landscape, creating a dramatic contrast between light and dark. Watch as the ocean comes alive with turtles, dolphins and migrating humpback whales.

This awe-inspiring experience, limited to a small group, offers travelers the unique opportunity to step off the grid and be immersed in one of the most pristine environments that West Australia has to offer. Teaming with unique flora and fauna, this world heritage island is steeped in history and surrounded by colourful corals and an abundance of marine life.
